100. C. The patient is a 40-year-old female with a 10-year history of rheumatoid arthritis. She has been on chronic low-dose prednisone (5 mg daily) for the past 5 years. She presents with a 2-week history of increasing weakness, particularly in the lower extremities, and difficulty climbing stairs. She also reports frequent falls and a sensation of "giving out" when walking. Her symptoms are worse in the morning and improve slightly with activity. She has no recent weight loss, fever, or changes in bowel habits. Her last menstrual period was 3 months ago. She is a nonsmoker and drinks alcohol occasionally. Her medical history is significant for hypertension and type 2 diabetes mellitus. She is currently taking lisinopril, metformin, and aspirin. Her family history is notable for osteoporosis in her mother and grandmother. She has no known drug allergies. Physical examination reveals mild muscle wasting in the lower extremities and decreased reflexes at the knees and ankles. There is no sensory deficit. Laboratory studies show a hemoglobin of 12 g/dL, hematocrit of 36%, and platelet count of 150,000/mm³. Serum electrolytes, creatinine, and liver function tests are within normal limits. Antinuclear antibody (ANA) is positive at a titer of 1:160. Erythrocyte sedimentation rate (ESR) is 45 mm/h. Urinalysis is normal. A bone density scan (DEXA) shows osteopenia at the lumbar spine. The patient's symptoms and physical findings are most consistent with a complication of her long-term corticosteroid therapy. The most likely diagnosis is osteoporosis-related fracture or myopathy. The next step in management would be to obtain a detailed history of her steroid use, perform a physical examination focusing on muscle strength and reflexes, and consider further diagnostic testing such as serum calcium, vitamin D levels, and possibly a muscle biopsy if a myopathy is suspected. The patient should also be counseled on fall prevention strategies and the importance of maintaining adequate calcium and vitamin D intake. The most appropriate answer is C, which likely refers to a specific management step or diagnosis related to the patient's condition.
